Headline:
Rather cloudy, but brighter in east. Some drizzle over hills.

Today:
Dry but rather cloudy start, especially across the Peak District, although some brighter spells possible elsewhere. Cloud then thickening from the northwest though the day, although staying dry for most with any rain or drizzle likely limited to northwestern hills. Maximum temperature 15 deg C (59 deg F).

Tonight:
Cloudy overnight, with isolated outbreaks of rain and drizzle gradually spreading south. These mainly light and sporadic, but more persistent and heavier at times across the Derbyshire hills. Feeling mild. Minimum temperature 8 deg C (46 deg F).

Wednesday:
Dull start with outbreaks of rain and drizzle gradually easing away south during the morning. Brighter spells follow, but still rather cloudy with the odd light shower possible. Maximum temperature 11 deg C (52 deg F).

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:
Early mist clearing Thursday, then likely dry but staying rather cloudy with only limited brighter spells. Breezy Friday, with chance of rain spreading east. Brighter spells Saturday, with showers possible.
